Anniston, from Metricool

Enjoy the week!

We will bring more news next week, Metricooler. But don't worry, because next week I'm sure something is sure to happen. If there’s one thing Honestly, at least the spotlight isn’t on Twitter again, am I right?

Video: How to use TikTok Creativity Center to create and monetize your videos

Now, the requirements have dropped to:

- 1,000 subscribers
- 10,000 views on the channel
- 1 million views to the video
- 3 million views to shorts in the last 90 days.

Previously, to enter the program, content creators needed at least 1,000 channel subscribers, and 4,000 hour of viewing time.

But the latest to jump in is YouTube.

The “war” between the social networks to attract content creators is still going on. Twitch continues to fight with profit sharing, Kick appears, and Twitter continues to offer new scripts, or the copy of your content.

And although it’s not in TikTok, in Metricool we have an

Also, TikTok adds in the comment box, “Send a message”, indicating that these reactions are limited to emojis that the social network offers to you by default, and you can’t use other elemental graphics.

As you can see in the image, reactions seem to be limited to emojis that the social networks offer to you by default, and you can’t use other elemental graphics.

The same that happens in Instagram will happen on TikTok:

TikTok is now adding video reactions.
