strategist Juan Galán. Sign up for the Metriool Audit Series! Make sure to tune in and learn how to best audit your Instagram account, with growth tips and insights.

See you in next week's newsletter!

Hopefully soon we can have a break from the drama…

What another crazy week, Metricooler, Threads just keeps growing, and Elon is getting fired up. Who do you think will win?

In the event that you have given your consent for the sending of communication about news and/or promotions from Metricool. You have the right of access, rectification, deletion, limitation, opposition to processing, portability and not to be subject to automated decisions with legal effects or that significantly affect you in the exercise of your rights.

In this section, where you can currently create posts with links, text, images, or videos, YouTube is still working on improving its Community tab. In the future, users will be able to create long-form videos, similar to YouTube’s own Community Tab. Additionally, users will be able to add questions and answers to their posts, allowing for more engagement and interaction.

Seeing the screenshot of the tweet, what we don’t know is if the feed will also include new features such as long-form videos and Quizzes, which are coming to YouTube. These new features will allow users to engage with content in a similar way. You can exercise your rights at info@metricool.com.

In the case of Twitter, they are testing a feature that will be of interest, an article section. Many users, Blue of course, took advantage of this to create long tweets. And now, Twitter is testing a feature that will be of interest, an article section. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. Twitter surprised everyone with the increase of character per tweet, first with 4,000 and then 280 characters. Now, YouTube is going to include ‘Quizzes’, where you have the option to add a question and answers to your post, allowing for more engagement and interaction.

New powerful analytics were added to the data you see in each tweet. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. New Twitter Analytics is a feature that allows you to track how your tweets are performing. You can see impressions, interaction rate, replies or retweets, among others, in each tweet. To see them you have to: click on New Twitter Analytics. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles.

Long texts that you can create within Twitter and that users can access without leaving their timeline are a new feature on Twitter. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. This store already existed in the social network, but perhaps in a goal to attract new users, it has been added to the social network.

“read more” option to see the full tweet is another feature that has been added to Twitter. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. This feature allows users to read more content without leaving their timeline. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles.

Twitter is working on a new feature called “For You” feed, which is similar to the “Following” feed. In this section, you can create posts with links, text, images, or videos. The “For You” feed is a section where the algorithm will decide what to show to users based on their interests and engagement. This feature will help users discover new content that is relevant to them. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles.

Twitter is also working on improving its “For You” feed, which is similar to the “Following” feed. In this section, you can create posts with links, text, images, or videos. The “For You” feed is a section where the algorithm will decide what to show to users based on their interests and engagement. This feature will help users discover new content that is relevant to them. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles.

In addition, in an attempt to ‘imitate’ TikTok’s success, Facebook has even included a video section on its feed. Similar to what they did on Instagram, where both videos and Reels appear in the same section, this new feature will allow users to see a variety of content in one place. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. There is no date for Threads to arrive. We may be looking at 2024. To be 100% sure of this compliance could take several months.

The reason being, Meta has to agree to comply with all rules, that will come into force in the European Union, before the service could arrive. We may be looking at 2024. A few days ago, Adam Mosseri, Instagram CEO, was asked if the social network would release Threads in the European Union. He didn’t give a release date. While the US racks up millions of users, the EU still doesn’t even have a concrete release date. Adam Mosseri doesn’t release Threads date in the European Union.

We don’t have a date for Threads in the European Union. In short, and even in the words of Instagram’s CEO, we don’t have a date for Threads in the European Union.

What do you think of this news? For me it’s a bit disappointing, and above all: "Elon that actually makes me happy!"

So of course this new Twitter novelty had to be mentioned. Plus, it’s the first release from Meta’s original social media network, which is working on a new section on your feed: a video section. Similar to what they did on Instagram, where both videos and Reels appear in the same section, this new feature will allow users to see a variety of content in one place. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles.

Publication by the European Online Men’ Viores Association (EEOMV). You already know that I’m a fan of social media analytics, right? From here you can see impressions, interaction rate, replies or retweets, among others, in each tweet. New powerful analytics were added to the data you see in each tweet. To see them you have to: click on New Twitter Analytics. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles. As you can see in the image from Fausto Chou’s tweet, it’s similar to LinkedIn articles.

If you don’t use videos or Reels on Facebook yet! It seems that the objective is to give more importance to videos on Facebook, to take note of their high engagement rates. In this section based on your interests and engagement, "For You" feed in this section. With a similar function: the algorithm will decide what to show to users in this section. In addition, in an attempt to ‘imitate’ TikTok’s success, Facebook has even included a video section on its feed.

Brands, creators, and users in the EU will start at a disadvantage if Threads ends up arriving in the EU. The drama continues! And it what we thought was the end, just might be the beginning… Zuckerberg was quick to squash this, and reported that no one on the Threads team was stealing their intellectual property, and hiring ex-Twitter employees to create a "copycat" app. Unsurprisingly, Elon Musk won’t go down without a fight. The spotlight is still on Threads, while Twitter is left out in the dark.

After we saw a record-breaking number of users download Threads, the spotlight was on Threads. The release date was still unknown, but at least, the team behind it wasn’t involved in any unethical behavior. A few days ago, Adam Mosseri, Instagram CEO, was asked if the social network would release Threads in the European Union. He didn’t give a release date. While the US racks up millions of users, the EU still doesn’t even have a concrete release date.