

Paying to use social media platforms is something that has gotten a little out of hand.

Elon Musk reinvented the market with Twitter Blue, which has led other networks to follow, such as Instagram. Meta Verified is their own subscription service, that has a few benefits for the user, the most prominent being the verified checkmark on their account. And of course, with the launch of this program, they need to retain those users that have already invested.

verified accounts content. This means that those paying for Meta Verified will have a dedicated feed for content.

Said and done. The latest from Instagram is the launch of a new feed, exclusively for

Is this all positive? Not entirely, since its in the users hand to look at this feed. However, the one advantage that I think will be interesting is that verified accounts will have more opportunities to appear in this feed. As long as Instagram shows the user content from verified accounts they follow, and recommended content.

We're testing a way for people to explore their Instagram feed and reels by toggling to only Meta Verified accounts. We're exploring this as a new control for people and a way for businesses and creators to get discovered. It seems that Threads is making its way into the narrative, and slowly adds some new features.

And that is, Threads is working on the option to automatically share your thread on

Audio and video calls are of cial NOW Elon Musk has already made his goals on X clear, to turn it into an app that covers all terrain. And little by little users wishes have come true because... IT'S OFFICIAL! Audio and video calls have arrived to X. It's interesting to see how far this app has come, and what else X will tap into. What do you this about this feature? I'm slightly skeptical due to the nature of the social network, and now in X, many additional features haven't been as popular as predicted...  $\mathbb{X}$ X News Daily 📀 @xDaily · Follow BREAKING: Audio calling is now LIVE! while Watch on X 1:24 PM
